

LATHER, Provenance Hotels Partner to Create All-Natural Soaps

PORTLAND, ORE.—Provenance Hotels, a hotel company passionate about conspiring with likeminded independent companies, has teamed up with LATHER, a modern apothecary that develops natural body and skincare products infused with essential oils, to create a line of soaps crafted in collaboration with some of Portland's most respected culinary artisans.

LATHER and Provenance Hotels have created an Exfoliating Body Bar with Pink Salt that is made with salt hand-harvested by Jacobsen from the Oregon coast and infused with Oregon Pinot Noir. This soap is infused with lavender essential oils sourced in Oregon.

With Bee Local, a company that produces single-origin honeys and oversees Provenance Hotels' rooftop bee hives in Portland, they have created an Exfoliating Honey-Oatmeal Body Bar that features Bee Local honey, mint essential oil from Washington, lavender essential oil from Oregon and exfoliating oatmeal to gently cleanse the skin.

Smith Teamaker has lent their expertise to help create an invigorating Exfoliating Peppermint Body Bar that features peppermint tea leaves harvested in Oregon and mint essential oil from Washington. All three soaps also feature all-natural ingredients to moisturize and protect the skin like olive oil, shea butter, bamboo extract and Vitamin E.

Provenance Hotels and LATHER will be rolling these co-conspirator soaps out into guestrooms at the company's Pacific Northwest hotels over the first six months of 2017. If guests want to take home the fresh indulgence of this bath experience or give them as gifts, the set will be available for purchase in a set of three 1.6 oz. bars in the guestroom honor bars later this year.
